

HOW A WARSHIP ACTED AS A BREWERY SALESMAN

CORMORANT OFFICERS INTRODUCED PRIMO BEER TO GERMAN RESIDENTS OF SAMOA—LATTER LIKED LOCAL BEER AND PROFITABLE LITTLE EXPORT TRADE HAS SINCE BEEN ESTABLISHED WITH APIA PEOPLE.

It is not every concern that can get a warship to engage in soliciting for it but the Honolulu Brewing Company enjoys such distinction. Through the officers of the German cruiser Cormorant a couple of years ago the company has built up quite a profitable export trade with the merchants of Apia.

When the Cormorant was in Honolulu, the officers drank Primo beer and liked it, so when the vessel sailed for the South Sea Islands it was decided to lay in a supply of fresh bottled beer from the local brewery. The beer lasted until a few days after the vessel reached Samoa. Leading members of the German colony at Apia were invited aboard the cruiser and during the pro-gross of entertainment, were given some of the Honolulu beer to drink. They tasted the beer and liked it too and asked for more. The supply was soon used up the crowd shaking dice to see who would get the last bottle.

After the vessel left Apia the merchants communicated with the local brewery and ordered some of the local product. Bottled beer was sent to Samoa. The people liked it and a trade has since been gradually built up. Apia is the only foreign place where the Hawaiian beer is sent. The brewery is now able to handle orders for export, as it has enlarged its plant considerably but thus far, no effort has been made to establish such trade.

Chicago Professor Lost In Oahu Mountains

PROF. GEORGE MEAD STARTED TO MAKE ROUND TRIP TO OLYMPUS YESTERDAY AFTERNOON BUT GOT LOST—MANY SEARCHING PARTIES IN QUEST OF HIM LAST NIGHT—WAS FOUND THIS MORNING.

When Professor George Mead of the University of Chicago gets back home, he will probably recall his visit to Honolulu more vividly by a reference to getting lost in the wilds than by any native folk-lore that he may have acquired while in Hawaii. He went through a very distressing experience last night and had a narrow escape from serious if not fatal injury. He was lost in the mountains.

Professor Mead and his wife and son arrived on the Mongolia to visit his brother-in-law, G. P. Castle of Manoa Valley. Professor Mead started yesterday afternoon from the Castle residence to make the round trip walk to Mount Olympus. He is a very hardy mountain climber and while such a trip is a severe test on an average man, Professor Mead would have made the trip without inconvenience but for losing his way. He arrived at Olympus safely and started back in the afternoon. He followed the main ridge that divides Manoa and Palolo valleys. In order to go down into Manoa Valley he should have taken a small trail that turned off to the right and crossed over a minor side ridge known to Manoa Valley residents as the "Triangle." He missed this trail however in the dusk and continued on along the main ridge toward Kamohili. When he discovered his mistake he retraced his steps but again passed the side trail and finally turned off to the right toward the Waialeale Gulch and there got lost as then the moon set.

In the meanwhile the people at the Castle place had become alarmed over the absence of Professor Mead and Mrs. Castle ordered a number of Japanese to go in search of the missing educator. Three of the Japs with lanterns discovered Mead about 1 o'clock this morning, very cold and hopelessly lost off the main trail. It was decided that it would be easier to reach Manoa valley by going down through the Gulch than trying to go back and finding the little trail down the Triangle, so two Japanese went ahead to show the way.

These leaders fell over a small bank that was hidden by ferns. One of them Kuninobi, struck on a rock and sustained a bad wound on the head, being rendered unconscious. The other man escaped serious injury. It was at first thought that Kuninobi had been killed and the other Japanese called to Professor Mead to keep back or he too would fall down the bank, which must have been ten to fifteen feet deep. Thinking that the Japanese had been killed Professor Mead started toward the top of the main ridge again in hopes of securing help.

The Japanese revived however and he and his companion made their way back home. When they arrived at the Castle place with the information that they had found and then lost Professor Mead, everybody at the place especially the family of the missing man were terribly alarmed. Mr. Castle telephoned to the police station. Some of the mounted officers were ordered by Clerk Baker to start in search of the lost man. Other searches were sent out from the Castle place and about day break Professor Mead was found. He had suffered greatly from exposure as the night air was very cold.

HIS LORDSHIP BISHOP LIBERT TO VISIT THE POPE AT ROME

LOCAL HEAD OF CATHOLIC CHURCH TO VISIT HIS HOLINESS TO EXPRESS THANKS AND OBEDIENCE—WILL LEAVE HONOLULU IN APRIL AND BE ABSENT UNTIL NOVEMBER—IS PAYING AN OFFICIAL VISIT.

His Lordship the Bishop of Zeugma, Right Rev. Father Libert will leave within the course of a few months to pay his respects to His Holiness Pope Plus X. His Lordship will leave in April and will make an extended visit, not returning to Honolulu until November.

The proposed visit of His Lordship to the Pope is a clerical custom. Every new bishop consecrated always pays an official visit to the pope as soon as is convenient after such consecration. The officers are supposed to pay such visit within at least ten years after their appointment. Right Rev. Father Libert was made Bishop by the late Pope Leo XIII shortly before the death of that Pontiff, so the local Bishop did not have the opportunity now to visit that Pontiff. The visit will therefore, be paid to the Pontifical successor. In addition to visiting the Vatican at Rome, Bishop Libert will make an extended tour of Europe visiting among other places his native city of Antwerp.

Bishop Libert came to the Hawaiian Islands about 21 years ago in company with Father Oliver. The latter returned to Belgium last year and returned to Honolulu in November with a number of sisters and priests for the diocese. It is not known whether His Lordship will have any of the fathers of the church accompany him on his trip or not.
